

Waterstriders are long thin waterbugs commonly seen on the surface of calm waters. These insects swim by rowing with their middle legs. They steer with their hind legs. Their forelegs capture small prey. Marine waterstriders are the only insects known to live on the open sea.